Dear Caregivers,

Over the past two years, Canadians across the country have gone the extra mile to make sure vulnerable people are protected, especially seniors and the elderly. In addition to the efforts of frontline healthcare workers, family members and friends have taken on immense responsibilities to support their loved ones. This often comes on top of a full work schedule.

National Caregiver Day is an opportunity to recognize the inspiring commitment of caring Canadians, and the selfless work they do to help the people they love.

I'm proud to recognize your heroic service, and celebrate employers who enable and support their staff who become caregivers. I know this continues to create enormous strains on your mental health.

As we look ahead to new challenges after the pandemic, I extend my sincere thanks to the Canadian Home Care Association for your ongoing work, and to all homecare providers across the country.

Sincerely,
